From 2001 through 2006 the Bush Justice Department investigated elected Democratic office holders and office seekers locally (non-state-wide and non federal offices) at a rate more than seven times greater (nearly 85% to 12 %) than they investigated local Republican elected office holders and seekers. This was so even though, throughout the nation, Democrat elected officials outnumber Republican elected officials at the rate of only 50% to 41%. Nine percent of elected officials are Independent/Other.

Such an investigatory rate constitutes Democrat Political Profiling and that rate exceeds the national statistics for the very illegal act of Racial Profiling during traffic stops.

What is needed is that the federal government be required to keep statistics on Political Profiling and report them publicly, just as the federal government requires the states to report racial profiling at traffic stops.
