RIDER TO FORM 95

8. The basis of this claim is under the Federal Tort Claims Act, 28 U.S.C. § 1346 and 28 U.S.C. § 2671, et seq.

This notice of claim is filed on behalf of claimant, Joe Holcombe, who is the natural parent of John Bryan Holcombe, deceased (referred to as “JB Holcombe”). This Claim arises from the tragic shooting death of JB Holcombe on Sunday, November 5, 2017, on or about 11:30 A.M. in the First Baptist Church of Sutherland Springs located in Sutherland Springs, Texas. Twenty-six individuals were killed in the shooting, including decedent JB Holcombe, and twenty others were seriously injured.

Simply put, JB Holcombe’s death was caused, in whole or in part, by the institutional failures of the United States Department of Defense, including, but not limited to, the United States Air Force (“US Air Force”), in that these entities negligently, recklessly, carelessly and/or egregiously failed to report pertinent criminal arrest, conviction and military discharge information of the shooter into a federal database, as was required, which would have prevented and barred the shooter from purchasing, owning, and/or possessing the firearms, ammunition and body armor that he used in the shooting. Incredibly, and quite frankly tragically, the Department of Defense, the US Air Force, and others, were aware as far back as 1997, and more specifically in at least 2015, that the US Air Force (as well as other branches of the United States military) routinely failed to report such required criminal arrest and conviction information. As a result of an internal review conducted by the Inspector General of the Department of Defense which uncovered these repeated failures, the US Air Force agreed that it would take “prompt action to ensure” that convicted offenders are properly reported to appropriate federal databases to prevent them from legally purchasing, owning, and/or possessing firearms, ammunition and/or body armor. Despite this notice and call to action, the Department of Defense, specifically including, but not limited to, the US Air Force, utterly failed in their reporting obligations which was the proximate cause of the decedent JB Holcombe's death.

It is undisputed that the perpetrator and sole shooter in this action was former US Air Force member Airman Devin Patrick Kelley ("the shooter"). Upon information and belief, and as the result of a domestic dispute with his in-laws, the shooter entered the First Baptist Church on the morning of November 5, 2017 dressed in all black, clad in body armor and armed with a Ruger Semi-Automatic AR-556 rifle that he purchased from a legal and authorized vendor sometime in April 2016. The shooter killed 26 parishioners and injured 20 others, some critically. Upon leaving the church the shooter was confronted by a good Samaritan who shot the shooter twice – once in the leg and once in the chest. The shooter fled the scene and was involved in a high-speed car chase. He then took his own life after his car veered off the road.

Although the shooter undoubtedly "pulled the trigger" that resulted in the injuries and death of JB Holcombe and others, the failures of the US Air Force, and others, allowed the shooter to purchase, own and/or possess the semiautomatic rifle, ammunition and body armor he used, and it is these failures that were a proximate cause, in whole or in part, of the injuries and death of the decedent. The US military, specifically including the US Air Force, designed and implemented policies, procedures, regulations and/or guidelines that were specifically designed to prevent individuals such as the shooter from purchasing, owning and/or possessing firearms, ammunition and body armor. It is the failure by the US Air Force to abide by these policies, procedures, regulations and/or guidelines that directly caused this horrific tragedy.

It is undisputed that Airman Kelley was a member of the US Air Force, having been on active duty from 2009 until 2014 and stationed at Holloman Air Force Base located in Otero County, New Mexico. In April 2011 Airman Kelley married Tessa K. Loge, who had an infant son from a previous marriage. It is not disputed that after his marriage, then-Airman Kelley was arrested for assault upon his wife and her son, wherein he inflicted serious injuries upon the two, including, but not limited to, fracturing the skull of the infant boy. He was also charged with pointing a loaded gun at his wife, and two counts of threatening his spouse with an unloaded firearm.

Upon information and belief, because of these criminal charges a general Court Martial was convened and Airman Kelley was convicted of assault on his wife and her son on November 7, 2012. Due to these convictions Airman Kelley was sentenced to a year in military jail. At that time, he admitted striking the infant boy “with a force likely to produce death or grievous bodily harm”. With respect to the assault against his spouse, Kelley admitted that he “hit, kicked, choked and pulled the hair” of his wife. The couple were divorced while Kelley served his jail sentence in a naval brig located in San Diego, California.

Airman Kelley was also known to have made threats against his superiors in the Air Force as well as to have attempted to smuggle guns onto the base in violation of Air Force regulations and base standard operating procedures. In addition, given the nature of the criminal charges pending against him, in the Spring of 2012, the Air Force involuntarily committed Airman Kelley to the Peak Behavioral Health Services, a mental facility located in Santa Teresa, New Mexico which has a dedicated unit for US military personnel. On June 7, 2012 Airman Kelley jumped a fence and escaped from the mental facility. He was apprehended by local law enforcement later that same day and was returned to the facility to await his court martial. At the time of his apprehension, it was noted by local law enforcement authorities that Kelley was suffering from mental health issues and that he was a “danger to himself and others”.

After capture, Kelley was detained at the mental health facility and ordered into pre-trial confinement while awaiting his court martial. Upon information and belief, during this time Kelley used computers at the facility to attempt to purchase weapons and tactical gear via the internet and have those items shipped to a post office box located in San Antonio, Texas. Upon information and belief, the US Air Force was specifically aware that Kelley attempted to make these firearm purchases while detained at the mental health facility.

Eventually, in May 2014, after serving his military prison sentence, the Air Force discharged Kelley with a "bad conduct discharge" rather than a dishonorable discharge, simply reducing him in Rank to that of E-1 rather than stripping him of his service. Like his prior criminal convictions, the US Air Force utterly failed to enter his "bad conduct discharge" into federal databases. A "bad conduct discharge" following court-martial was yet another event that should have disqualified Kelley from purchasing, owning or possessing firearms and ammunition.

Due to the foregoing, and most notably his assault arrest and convictions, bad conduct discharge post court-martial and involuntary commitment to a mental facility, the US Air Force, specifically including, but not limited to, the Office of Special Investigations at Holloman Air Force Base ("AFOSI"), and/or the HQ Air Force Security Forces ("HAF/A4S") were required to enter his November 2012 criminal arrest and conviction information into certain computerized databases, specifically including, the FBI's Criminal Justice Information Systems ("CJIS"). The CJIS comprises various computer databases, specifically including the National Crime Information Center ("NCIC") database, Uniform Crime Reporting, Fingerprint Identification and the IAFIS Program which includes both fingerprint and final criminal disposition data. These databases are computerized databases for ready access by an authorized entity making an inquiry into the background of an individual and for prompt disclosure of information in the system from other criminal justice agencies about crimes and criminals. Specifically, the NCIC database is accessed for a number of purposes, and is one such database that is required to be accessed whenever a person seeks to legally purchase certain firearms. Certain criminal convictions, specifically including those of which Airman Kelley was convicted, are required to be entered into the NCIC and other CJIS-related databases. Had Airman Kelley's criminal arrest, conviction and/or bad conduct discharge information been entered, as was required by US Air Force policies, procedures, regulations and/or guidelines, Airman Kelley would have been prevented and prohibited from purchasing, owning and/or possessing firearms, ammunition and body armor, specifically including the firearm and body armor that he used in the shooting.

Significantly, the Department of Defense has promulgated regulations that impose upon the various branches of the military, specifically including the US Air Force, certain reporting requirements when a serviceman is convicted of a crime. See Department of Defense INSTRUCTION, Number 5505.11 and subsequent revisions/changes. It is undisputed, and has been readily admitted by the US Air Force in the days following this horrific tragedy, that Airman Kelley's convictions and criminal history were required to be entered into the NCIC database and/or CJIS system but for reasons not presently known the Air Force utterly failed in their reporting obligations. It is also undisputed that had the information been entered into these databases by the Air Force at the time of his convictions in and around November 2012, as was required, Airman Kelley would have been prevented, prohibited and barred from purchasing, owning and/or possessing the firearms, ammunition and body armor used in this massacre and this tragedy would not have occurred.

The failures of the Department of Defense, specifically including the US Air Force, are not limited to their failure to timely and accurately enter and/or report Airman Kelley's criminal arrest and conviction information into the appropriate computer database in November 2012. In February 2015 the Inspector General for the U.S. Department of Defense conducted a comprehensive review of the failures of the branches of the US military to promptly and accurately input criminal conviction information into the appropriate computer database, specifically including the NCIC database. See Evaluation of Department of Defense Compliance with Criminal History Data Reporting Requirements, Report Number DODIG-2015-081, dated February 12, 2015 (referred to as the “IG’s Report”).

The IG’s Report examined the continuing failures of conviction reporting by the US Navy, US Air Force and US Marines. In his Report, the Inspector General recognized that as far back as 1997 the branches of the US military had not consistently submitted the required criminal arrest and conviction information to appropriate federal law enforcement agencies, including criminal information databases. See IG Report, at p. 12.

With respect to the US Air Force, the 2015 study took a sample of convicted individuals from June 2010 through and including October 31, 2012 (as mentioned above, Airman Kelley was convicted in November 2012 just days after the sample period). During this time frame, the Inspector General found that there were 358 criminal convictions of US Air Force personnel that mandated reporting obligations. However, only 248 fingerprint cards were entered into the appropriate database, representing a failure rate of approximately 31%. With respect to final criminal disposition information regarding these 358 convictions, only 245 final dispositions were reported, representing a failure rate of approximately 32%.

Due to these alarming failure rates (more than 3 out of 10 failures by the US Air Force to report required criminal arrest and conviction information) the Inspector General made certain recommendations to the branches of the US military, specifically including the US Air Force. The first recommendation was for the US Air Force to submit and enter the missing fingerprint and final criminal disposition information for the missing individuals identified in the sample period into the appropriate computer databases. Upon review of the Inspector General's Report the US Air Force "agreed" with this recommendation. Unfortunately, Airman Kelley's conviction occurred in November 2012, a mere one month outside the sample examined by the Inspector General.

The Inspector General also recommended that due to the high failure rate the US Air Force "take prompt action" to ensure that all arrestee information is properly reported and entered in the various criminal history databases. The US Air Force also specifically "agreed" with the Inspector General's recommendation. See IG Report, at p. 10.

Notwithstanding that the US Air Force was specifically aware in 2015 (and likely well before) that on average more than 3 out of 10 criminal arrest and conviction information was not reported, and despite their acknowledgement that they would "promptly ensure" that such systemic failures were corrected, the US Air Force utterly failed the general public, and more specifically the decedent JB Holcombe and his family, by failing to ensure that Airman Kelley's criminal arrest and convictions were properly reported. Despite their specific prior knowledge, the US Air Force utterly and carelessly failed in their reporting obligations which allowed this tragedy to occur and cost the decedent JB Holcombe his life. Had the US Air Force done as required, the shooter would not have been able to purchase, own and/or possess the automatic rifle and body armor that he used to slaughter and injure more than 46 individuals.

Claimant's allegations of negligence are not limited to the fact that the US Air Force's failures allowed Kelley to purchase, own and/or possess firearms. The utterly careless and reckless failures of the US Air Force to satisfy their reporting obligations with respect to Airman Kelley's criminal arrest and convictions resulted in numerous missed opportunities for various local law enforcement agencies to prevent further violence by Kelley. Upon information and belief, after his bad conduct discharge from the military local law enforcement personnel made more than 17 visits to Kelley's home on allegations ranging from animal cruelty to domestic violence and sexual assault. For example, on or about June 7, 2013, Comal County, Texas deputies responded to Kelley's home to investigate a report of "rape by force" allegedly perpetrated by Kelley. Without information as to Kelley's prior convictions, deputies investigated the report for months following the report, but no charges were brought once investigators believed Kelley moved to Colorado. Had the information regarding Kelley's criminal arrest and conviction for domestic violence been entered, as was required, Comal County law enforcement would have been aware of that information and perhaps been able to bring felony charges under the Texas Penal Code against Kelley in 2013.

In early 2014, local police in Texas responded to Kelley's home to investigate reports of domestic abuse of his then girlfriend Danielle Shields, but charges were not pursued after Shields told responding officers the report was the result of a misunderstanding. Had the US Air Force reported Airman Kelley's criminal arrest and convictions for domestic violence, local law enforcement would have had reason to further investigate any claim of misunderstanding and perhaps pursued felony charges under the Texas Penal Code against Kelley in 2014. In August 2014, Colorado law enforcement responded to Kelley's home to investigate claims of animal cruelty allegedly perpetrated by Kelley, resulting in a standoff with police once Kelley refused to come out of the home. Without information as to Kelley's prior convictions, law enforcement issued Kelley a citation rather arresting him. Had Colorado local law enforcement had information regarding Kelley's violent criminal past, perhaps Kelley would have been arrested and incarcerated in August of 2014.

Had the information regarding Kelley's criminal arrest and conviction been entered, as was required, local law enforcement personnel would have been aware of that information when they conducted various welfare checks at the shooter's home in Texas in the months leading up to the shooting. Upon information and belief, local law enforcement also visited the shooter's home due to domestic assault allegations. Had they known that he was convicted of a prior domestic assault, they may have properly entered the home and seized any weapons that were visible, or pursued felony charges under the Texas Penal Code against Kelley at that time. As with his military convictions, any conviction for domestic violence after he was discharged from the military would have likewise barred, prohibited and/or prevented from purchasing, owning and/or possessing firearms, ammunition and body armor, including the semiautomatic rifle and body armor used in the massacre.

Based upon the foregoing, the injuries and death of decedent JB Holcombe was caused, in whole or in part, by the negligence, recklessness, and/or carelessness of the United States of America, through the US Air Force, including, but not limited to, in that the US Air Force failed to adhere to the regulations, policies, procedures, and/or guidelines issued by the Department of Defense in failing to report the shooter's criminal arrest and convictions to appropriate federal law enforcement agencies and databases, as was required, thereby allowing the shooter to purchase the semiautomatic rifle, ammunition and body armor used in the massacre; had the US Air Force complied with their necessary and mandatory reporting requirements, the shooter would have been barred, prohibited and/or prevented from purchasing, owning and/or possessing firearms, ammunition and body armor, including the semiautomatic rifle and body armor used in the massacre and thus, the shooting would not have taken place; in that the US Air Force failed to comply with Department of Defense regulations, policies, procedures, and/or guidelines, specifically including, but not limited to, Department of Defense INSTRUCTION, Number 5505.11 and subsequent revisions/changes, thereby allowing the shooter to purchase the firearm, ammunition and body armor used in the shooting; in that the US Air Force failed to correct known deficiencies in its criminal arrest and conviction reporting obligations; in that despite its public statements to the contrary the US Air Force failed to adhere or heed the recommendations promulgated by the Inspector General of the Department of Defense concerning its systemic failures to properly report arrest and criminal conviction information; in that the US Air Force failed to comply with its obligations and duties regarding criminal arrest and conviction reporting; in that the US Air Force was specifically aware for years prior to the shooting that it had consistently failed to report required arrest and criminal conviction information and failed to correct these deficiencies; in that the US Air Force failed to appropriately abide by and follow its own internal procedures regarding criminal arrest and conviction information; created a dangerous condition to the public, and specifically to the decedent JB Holcombe, by failing to adhere, comply and/or follow required criminal arrest and conviction information reporting obligations; in that the US Air Force breached the duty of care owed to the public generally, and to the decedent JB Holcombe specifically, in that it failed to report required criminal arrest and conviction information; in that the US Air Force failed to discuss their deficiencies with other branches of the US military and/or other governmental agencies in an attempt to correct these known deficiencies; in that the US Air Force unleashed on the public a dangerous individual who had the ability to purchase firearms, ammunition and body armor when he should have been prevented from doing so; and was otherwise careless, reckless and/or negligent all of which individually and/or jointly, proximately caused, in whole or in part, the subject shooting and the injuries and death of the decedent JB Holcombe.

The instant notice of claim is filed by and on behalf of claimant, Joe Holcombe, the parent of the decedent JB Holcombe, and on behalf of the decedent's estate, its heirs, and/or any individual entitled to recover under the applicable damages law, including, but not limited to, [REDACTED] for wrongful death damages suffered as a result of the death of the decedent as set forth above.

Joe Holcombe seeks all wrongful death damages for his losses only under the applicable law, including, but not limited to, all economic and non-economic damages, including the loss of past and future income, support, society, love, grief, consortium, services, guidance, care, comfort, companionship and inheritance of the decedent, loss of life's pleasures, loss of enjoyment of life, damages for mental anguish and mental pain and suffering, as well as any other damages recoverable under the applicable law.
