ORDER

16 THIS MATTER comes before the Court on (i) a motion for summary judgment, 17 docket no. 28, brought by plaintiffs Robert Doucette, Bernadine Roberts, Saturnino 18 Javier, and Tresea Doucette, and (ii) a cross-motion for summary judgment, docket 19 no. 31, brought by defendants United States Department of the Interior (“Interior”), 20 Interior Secretary David Bernhardt, Assistant Secretary Tara Sweeney, and Principal 21 Deputy Assistant Secretary (“PDAS”) John Tahsuda III. Having reviewed all papers 22 filed in support of, and in opposition to, the motions, the Court enters the following order.

Background

Plaintiffs were unsuccessful candidates for four open positions on the Nooksack Tribal Council, the governing body of the Nooksack Indian Tribe of Washington (the “Nooksack Tribe” or “Tribe”). They allege that, prior to the most recent change in presidential administrations, Interior had established a policy of “interpreting Tribal constitutional, statutory, and common law to determine whether the Tribal Council was validly seated as the governing body of the Tribe” for purposes of government-to-government relations. See Am. Compl. at ¶¶ 1-4, 24, 29, 31, 33, 39-40, 45, 47, 60-63 (docket no. 18). According to plaintiffs, in endorsing the results of primary and general elections conducted in the fall of 2017, defendants departed from Interior’s previous policy.

Plaintiffs assert a claim under the Administrative Procedure Act (“APA”) over which the Court has jurisdiction pursuant to 28 U.S.C. § 1331. See Alto v. Black, 738 F.3d 1111, 1124 (9th Cir. 2013); Goodface v. Grassrope, 708 F.2d 335, 338 (8th Cir. 1983). They seek a declaratory judgment, pursuant to 28 U.S.C. § 2201, that Interior’s alleged “change in policy” was “arbitrary, capricious, an abuse of discretion, or otherwise not in accordance with law.” See 5 U.S.C. § 706(2)(A); see also Am. Compl. at § VII.A (docket no. 18). Plaintiffs ask the Court to require defendants to determine anew whether the elections at issue were held in compliance with the laws of the Nooksack Tribe. See Am. Compl. at §§ VII.B-C (docket no. 18). Although plaintiffs have standing to pursue such remedy, see Chinook Indian Nation v. Zinke, 326 F. Supp. 3d 1128, 1140 (W.D. Wash. 2018), the Court concludes that plaintiffs are not, as a matter of law, entitled to

1 such relief because Interior never adopted a policy of construing Nooksack law with 2 respect to how Nooksack Tribal Council elections should be conducted, and defendants 3 could not have behaved inconsistently with a non-existent policy.

4 In refusing, for a period of time before the 2017 elections, to recognize actions
5 taken by the Nooksack Tribal Council, Interior did not purport to interpret Nooksack law 6 concerning the manner in which elections must be administered, but rather effectuated
7 the consequences to the Tribe of having failed to even hold an election before the terms 8 of half of the council members expired. Moreover, during the course of and subsequent 9 to the 2017 elections, Interior admirably balanced the deference it owes the Tribe, as a 10 sovereign entity, with its responsibility to ensure that it deals only with a duly constituted 11 governing body for the Tribe. Plaintiffs have not made the requisite showing to survive 12 summary judgment, and their APA claim and this action are therefore DISMISSED with 13 prejudice.

14 A. Composition of the Nooksack Tribal Council

15 The Nooksack Tribe has been federally recognized since 1973. Am. Compl. at 16 ¶ 15 (docket no. 18). According to its Constitution, the Tribe's governing body is the 17 Nooksack Tribal Council, which has eight seats, consisting of a chair, a vice-chair, a 18 secretary, a treasurer, and four positions lettered A through D. See Nooksack Const.
19 art. III, § 2, Ex. N to Galanda Decl. (docket no. 12-14). The term of each council 20 member is four years, with the tenure of the chair, secretary, and positions A and B 21 staggered by two years from the tenure of the vice-chair, treasurer, and positions C and 22 D. Id. at art. III, § 3. Thus, every other year, four positions on the Nooksack Tribal Council are up for election. At least five members of the Nooksack Tribal Council must be present at a meeting to constitute a quorum for transacting business. See Nooksack Bylaws art. II, § 4, Ex. N to Galanda Decl. (docket no. 12-14).

On March 24, 2016, the terms of the vice-chair, treasurer, and positions C and D expired without an election having been conducted to select persons to fill those seats. See Am. Compl. at ¶ 22 (docket no. 18). These “holdover” council members continued to take actions on behalf of the Tribe, including attempts to disenroll certain individuals from the Tribe. See Order at 1-6 (docket no. 62), Rabang v. Kelly, No. C17-88-JCC (W.D. Wash. Apr. 26, 2017).<sup>1</sup> On October 17, 2016, Lawrence S. Roberts, then Principal Deputy Assistant Secretary – Indian Affairs, wrote to Robert Kelly, Jr., then chair of the Nooksack Tribal Council (“Chairman Kelly”), and indicated that Interior “will only recognize those actions taken by the Council prior to March 24, 2016, when a quorum existed, and will not recognize any actions taken since that time because of the lack of a quorum.” AR 1. PDAS Roberts reiterated this message in a letter dated November 14, 2016, stating that Interior will not recognize elections or actions that are inconsistent <sup>1</sup> Five purportedly disenrolled individuals filed suit in this district, alleging that six of the eight members of the Nooksack Tribal Council and other tribal personnel violated the Racketeer Influenced and Corrupt Organizations Act (“RICO”) in fraudulently depriving them of their tribal membership. See Compl. (docket no. 1) & Am. Compl. (docket no. 7), Rabang v. Kelly, No. C17-88-JCC (W.D. Wash.). The RICO claims in Rabang were eventually dismissed, see Order (docket no. 166), Rabang v. Kelly, No. C17-88-JCC (W.D. Wash. July 31, 2018), and the former tribal members sought review. The appeal in Rabang has been stayed by the Ninth Circuit pending a decision in this matter. See Order, Rabang v. Kelly, No. 18-35711 (9th Cir. June 13, 2019).

with Nooksack law or the tribal court decisions in Belmont v. Kelly.<sup>2</sup> See AR 3-4. In correspondence sent on December 23, 2016, PDAS Roberts warned that the “lack of a quorum and inability to take official action puts all Federal funding to the Tribe at risk.” AR 5. PDAS Roberts further observed that Chairman Kelly and two “holdover” council members had attempted to “anoint” themselves as the Tribe’s supreme court, but had taken such action without a quorum and in the absence of a valid election, so Interior would continue to recognize only the decisions of the Northwest Intertribal Court System, which then operated the Nooksack Tribal Court of Appeals. See id.

B. Memorandum of Agreement

On August 25, 2017, Michael S. Black, then Acting Assistant Secretary – Indian Affairs, entered into a Memorandum of Agreement (“MOA”) with Chairman Kelly, the purpose of which was “to provide and to outline a procedure whereby” the Assistant Secretary (on behalf of Interior) would recognize a tribal council as the governing body of the Nooksack Tribe. See AR 7-12. The MOA indicated, however, that it was “not <sup>2</sup> In Belmont v. Kelly, 272 then-enrolled members of the Nooksack Tribe brought suit in Nooksack Tribal Court on behalf of themselves and their minor children to challenge efforts to disenroll them. On March 22, 2016, the Nooksack Tribal Court of Appeals refused to permit the Belmont defendants, which included Chairman Kelly, to file an interlocutory appeal from the trial court’s denial of a preliminary injunction that would have precluded the Belmont plaintiffs from voting in upcoming elections. Belmont v. Kelly, No. 2016-CI-APL-001 (Nooksack Ct. App. Mar. 22, 2016). The Nooksack Tribal Court of Appeals reasoned that (i) “[u]nder the Nooksack Constitution, an enrolled member of the Tribe is eligible to vote in elections,” (ii) although the Belmont plaintiffs might “eventually face disenrollment proceedings -- they are currently enrolled members,” and (iii) “[n]either the Constitution nor the Nooksack election code prohibits an enrolled member from voting even where the member is the target of disenrollment proceedings.” See AR 6.

1 intended by the parties to be either binding or enforceable upon either party, nor 2 enforceable through an administrative process or in a court of law.” AR 10. Under the 3 MOA, Acting Assistant Secretary Black provided interim recognition of Chairman Kelly 4 as “a person of authority within the Nooksack Tribe, through whom the Assistant 5 Secretary will maintain government-to-government relations with the Tribe for such time
6 as this MOA is in effect, for the purpose of the Nooksack Tribe holding a special election 7 and receiving funding under the Indian Self-Determination and Education Assistance 8 Act.” AR 8. The interim recognition was to remain in effect until one of the following 9 three events occurred: (i) the four vacant seats on the Nooksack Tribal Council were 10 filled via a valid election; (ii) the MOA was terminated for cause; or (iii) 120 days 11 elapsed after execution of the MOA. Id.

12 In the MOA, Chairman Kelly committed to conduct an election within 120 days.
13 AR 7. The election was to be held in accordance with the Nooksack Constitution and 14 Bylaws, as well as tribal laws and ordinances, and all eligible Nooksack voters would be 15 allowed to participate, regardless of county residency. Id. For purposes of the MOA, 16 eligible voters included individuals who were purportedly disenrolled since March 24, 17 2016. AR 8-9. The MOA provided that, if the Regional Director for the Northwest 18 Region of the Bureau of Indian Affairs (“BIA”) endorsed the special election results, the 19 Assistant Secretary “shall issue a letter granting full recognition” of the Nooksack Tribal 20 Council as the “valid governing body” of the Tribe. AR 8.

The Nooksack Tribe conducted a primary election on November 4, 2017, and a general election on December 2, 2017, AR 86, resulting in the Nooksack Tribal Council being composed of the following individuals:

Robert Kelly	Chairman
Richard “Rick” D. George	Vice-Chairman
Agripina “Abbie” Smith	Treasurer
Nadene Rapada	Secretary
Robert “Bob” Solomon	Position A
Carmen Tageant	Position B
Roy Bailey	Position C
Katherine Rose Romero	Position D

AR 668 (modified to show the newly elected members in bold font).

C. Recognition of Nooksack Tribal Council

Shortly after the MOA was signed, Interior itself had significant turnover. In September 2017, PDAS Roberts, the author of three letters sent to Chairman Kelly in 2016, which plaintiffs contend established Interior’s policy concerning the upcoming Nooksack Tribal Council elections, was replaced by defendant John Tahsuda III as Principal Deputy Assistant Secretary – Indian Affairs. See Am. Compl. at ¶ 44 (docket no. 18). In October 2017, Acting Assistant Secretary Black, who had executed the MOA on behalf of Interior, moved to the Bureau of Reclamation, and for some period of time thereafter, PDAS Tahsuda served as Acting Assistant Secretary – Indian Affairs. Defendant Tara Sweeney assumed the position of Assistant Secretary – Indian Affairs in August 2018. Id. at ¶ 67. Ryan Zinke, who appointed PDAS Tahsuda, resigned as Interior Secretary in January 2019 and was succeeded by defendant David Bernhardt, the current Secretary of the Department of the Interior. See id. at ¶ 68.

1 On March 7, 2018, Twyla Stange, Acting Regional Director (“Acting RD”) for the 2 Northwest Region of the BIA, sent a memorandum to PDAS Tahsuda, in his capacity as 3 Acting Assistant Secretary, endorsing the primary and general elections conducted on 4 November 4, 2017, and December 2, 2017, respectively. AR 86-90. Acting RD Stange
5 reported that the BIA had reviewed the declarations of Katrice Rodriguez (aka Romero), 6 the Election Superintendent<sup>3</sup> for the Nooksack Tribe, dated September 7, October 7, 7 November 21, and December 11, 2017, and January 16, 2018,<sup>4</sup> and concluded that the 8 elections were conducted in accordance with the requirements set forth in the Nooksack 9 Constitution and Title 62 of the Nooksack Tribal Code. AR 87 & 89-90.

13 <sup>3</sup> According to the Nooksack Constitution, prior to an election, the chair of the Nooksack Tribal 14 Council must appoint a superintendent for the election, who may select two ballot clerks.
15 Nooksack Const. art. IV, § 4, Ex. N to Galanda Decl. (docket no. 12-14). The superintendent 16 and ballot clerks constitute the election board, which has the duty of supervising and certifying 17 the election and resolving all election disputes. Id. For the primary and general elections at 18 issue, Chairman Kelly appointed as superintendent Katrice Rodriguez (aka Romero), who is the 19 twin sister of Katherine Romero (aka Canete), one of the candidates who ran in the race at issue.
20 In her March 2018 memorandum to PDAS Tahsuda, Acting RD Stange noted that the Nooksack Tribal Code did not prohibit a family relationship between the Election Superintendent and a candidate (who was also the Tribe’s general manager), AR 88, and she indicated that the BIA recognized Katrice Rodriguez as “the valid Election Superintendent vested with the powers to conduct and review this election,” AR 87. Although plaintiffs previously raised concerns about Katrice Rodriguez serving as Election Superintendent, see AR 88, 612, & 644, and about the qualifications of one of the two ballot clerks, see AR 673, they do not pursue any claim in this litigation relating to the composition of the election board.

21 <sup>4</sup> The Election Superintendent’s declarations are appended to Acting RD Stange’s March 2018
22 memorandum as Attachments 1 (AR 93-189), 2 (AR 191-223), 3 (AR 225-73), 4 (AR 275-609), 23 and 13 (AR 662-64).

1 In her March 2018 memorandum to PDAS Tahsuda, Acting RD Stange also 2 addressed specific challenges to the election,<sup>5</sup> only one of which plaintiffs continue to 3 advance in this case, namely that ballots were improperly cast in person, rather than by 4 mail. On this subject, Acting RD Stange offered the following analysis:

5 A complaint was raised to the BIA alleging the ballot box was “stuffed” 6 with illegal ballots cast in-person. . . . The BIA was involved throughout 7 the entire special election and closely inspected the election process. . . .
8 [T]he BIA has reconciled the voters list and accounted for all ballots 9 printed for the election. The BIA inspected the ballot identification numbers of received ballots and determined they match up to the list of returned ballots. There is neither evidence that ballots were cast by deceased individuals or people voting more than once, nor evidence that vote totals were altered.

10 AR 88-89. Acting RD Stange, however, ultimately concluded that the question of 11 whether ballots could be submitted by hand or had to be postmarked is “one of tribal law 12 and the BIA declines to insert itself and interpret tribal law in this instance.” AR 89.

13 Acting RD Stange’s unwillingness to interpret tribal law forms the basis of 14 plaintiffs’ claim for declaratory relief under the Administrative Procedure Act.

15 According to plaintiffs, Acting RD Stange’s refusal to interpret tribal law constitutes an 16 unexplained, and therefore arbitrary and capricious, departure from Interior’s prior

18 <sup>5</sup> Acting RD Stange concluded that (i) individuals who reached the age of 18 after March 2016 19 were appropriately excluded because they would not have been eligible to vote when the election 20 should have been held; (ii) the number of allegedly illegal votes (17) was less than the margin in 21 the closest race (26), and therefore had no effect on the outcome of the election; (iii) despite 22 assertions to the contrary, ballots were mailed to all eligible voters; (iv) no evidence supported 23 the accusation that votes were procured through bribery; and (v) the Nooksack Tribal Code did not require that the tallying of votes be performed in public. See AR 87-88. In the matter now before the Court, plaintiffs make no contention that these determinations were arbitrary, capricious, an abuse of discretion, or inconsistent with Interior’s policies and procedures.

1 policies, which were set forth in former PDAS Roberts's three letters to Chairman Kelly 2 in 2016, the MOA executed in August 2017, and a letter sent to Chairman Kelly in 3 September 2017 by Bodie Shaw, who preceded Twyla Stange as Acting Regional 4 Director for the Northwest Region of the BIA.<sup>6</sup>

5 On March 9, 2018, PDAS Tahsuda, exercising the authority of the Assistant 6 Secretary – Indian Affairs, signed a letter to Chairman Kelly, in which he recognized the 7 Nooksack Tribal Council. AR 668. PDAS Tahsuda indicated that the recognition would 8 extend until the results for the election originally scheduled for March 17, 2018, were 9 certified. Id. On June 11, 2018, PDAS Tahsuda, again exercising the authority of the 10 Assistant Secretary, authored a letter to Roswell Cline, Sr., congratulating him on his 11 election as chair of the Nooksack Tribal Council and inviting him to participate in 12 “government-to-government consultation” regarding issues affecting the relationship 13 between the United States and the Tribe. AR 669. In their operative pleading, plaintiffs 14 allude to Chairman Cline's criminal history, see Am. Compl. at ¶ 43 & n.3 (docket 15 no. 18), but they make no argument in this action that the election pursuant to which he 16 became chair was not properly conducted.

18 <sup>6</sup> The parties have not included Acting RD Shaw's correspondence in the Administrative Record, 19 but it was previously filed in response to defendants' unsuccessful motion to dismiss. See Ex. E 20 to Galanda Decl. (docket no. 12-5). In the September 2017 letter, Acting RD Shaw outlined a 21 number of measures that needed to be implemented to conduct a valid election, including the 22 appointment of a new Election Superintendent who did not have “a close personal or familial 23 connection to any sitting councilmember or any so-called holdover council member.” Id.
Although plaintiffs no longer contest the installation of Katrice Rodriguez as Election Superintendent, they have referred to Acting RD Shaw's letter as evidence of Interior's earlier policies concerning the interpretation of tribal law.

1 Discussion

2 A. Applicable Standards

3 The Administrative Procedure Act requires the Court to “hold unlawful and set 4 aside agency action, findings, and conclusions found to be . . . arbitrary, capricious, an 5 abuse of discretion, or otherwise not in accordance with law.” 5 U.S.C. § 706(2)(A).
 6 The scope of review under § 706(2)(A) is, however, narrow, and the Court must refrain 7 from substituting its judgment for that of the agency. Cal. Valley Miwok Tribe v. Jewell 8 [hereinafter Miwok], 5 F. Supp. 3d 86, 96 (D.D.C. 2013) (citing Motor Vehicle Mfrs.
 9 Ass’n of U.S., Inc. v. State Farm Mut. Auto. Ins. Co., 463 U.S. 29, 43 (1983)). Agency 10 action may be deemed “arbitrary, capricious, an abuse of discretion, or otherwise not in 11 accordance with law” when (i) the agency has failed to provide a reasoned explanation, 12 (ii) the record belies the agency’s conclusion, (iii) the agency’s rationale is “so 13 implausible that it could not be ascribed to a difference in view or the product of agency 14 expertise,” or (iv) the agency has inexplicably acted inconsistently with its prior 15 decisions. See Organized Vill. of Kake v. U.S. Dep’t of Agric. [hereinafter Kake], 795 16 F.3d 956, 966 (9th Cir. 2015) (en banc); see also Miwok, 5 F. Supp. 3d at 96; Seminole 17 Nation of Okla. v. Norton, 223 F. Supp. 2d 122, 131 (D.D.C. 2002).

18 Plaintiffs allege that, in recognizing the Nooksack Tribal Council as constituted 19 after the November and December 2017 primary and general elections, Interior departed 20 from its “established policy” of “interpreting Tribal constitutional, statutory, and common 21 law to determine whether the Tribal Council was validly seated as the governing body of 22 the Tribe” for purposes of government-to-government relations. See Am. Compl. at ¶¶ 1 23

1 & 24 (docket no. 18).<sup>7</sup> Defendants respond that Interior never adopted the policy
 2 described by plaintiffs and that, even if Interior had such policy, defendants did not act 3 inconsistently with it.

4 Summary judgment should be granted if no genuine dispute of material fact exists 5 and the moving party is entitled to judgment as a matter of law. Fed. R. Civ. P. 56(a).
 6 The adverse party's evidence "is to be believed" and all "justifiable inferences" are to be 7 drawn in such party's favor. Anderson v. Liberty Lobby, Inc., 477 U.S. 242, 255 (1986).
 8 When the record taken as a whole could not, however, lead a rational trier of fact to find 9 for the non-moving party, summary judgment is warranted. See Beard v. Banks, 548 U.S.
 10 521, 529 (2006); Matsushita Elec. Indus. Co. v. Zenith Radio Corp., 475 U.S. 574, 587
 11 (1986); see also Celotex Corp. v. Catrett, 477 U.S. 317, 322-23 (1986).

12 B. Interior's Policies

13 The concept of tribal sovereignty and self-determination dates back to at least the 14 framing of the Constitution itself. See U.S. Const. art. I, § 8, cl. 3; see also Ransom v.
 15 Babbitt, 69 F. Supp. 2d 141, 149 (D.D.C. 1999). Congress has repeatedly articulated a 16 federal policy of promoting tribal self-sufficiency and economic development, and the

18 <sup>7</sup> Plaintiffs do not contend that an agency may never alter its policies, but rather that, with respect 19 to any modification, the agency must (i) manifest its awareness about the change in position, 20 (ii) show that the new policy is permitted under the applicable statute, (iii) "believe" that the new 21 policy is better, and (iv) provide "good reasons" for the new policy. See Kake, 795 F.3d at 966 22 (citing FCC v. Fox Television Stations, Inc., 556 U.S. 502, 515-16 (2009)); see also Cayuga
Nation v. Bernhardt, 374 F. Supp. 3d 1, 15 (D.D.C. 2019). Plaintiffs assert that defendants have 23 not met this four-part test. Because the Court concludes that Interior did not establish the policy outlined by plaintiffs, it need not address whether defendants satisfied the criteria for changing course.

1 courts generally construe federal law in a manner that will preserve tribal sovereignty and 2 encourage tribal independence. See White Mountain Apache Tribe v. Bracker, 448 U.S.
3 136, 143-44 (1980). When the federal government must determine, for purposes of its 4 own interactions with a tribe, who or which entity it will recognize as having authority to 5 act on behalf of the tribe, it must do so “in harmony with the principles of tribal self-6 determination.” Ransom, 69 F. Supp. 2d at 150. Although the BIA must occasionally 7 interpret tribal law to address this issue, such efforts should “effect as little disruption as 8 possible” to tribal sovereignty and self-determination. Id. at 151.

9 Interior must also bear in mind the unique trust relationship between the United 10 States and Native American tribes. See Miwok, 5 F. Supp. 3d at 96-97. The BIA has a 11 “strict and heavy burden” to administer federal funds to be distributed to tribal members 12 in a manner that is consistent with the “highest fiduciary standards.” Seminole Nation, 13 223 F. Supp. 2d at 137-38. The Interior Secretary has a duty to protect not only the tribe, 14 but also individual tribal members, id. at 137, and must therefore ensure that the federal 15 government deals only with “a duly constituted government that represents the tribe as a 16 whole,” Miwok, 5 F. Supp. 3d at 97; see also Seminole Nation v. United States, 316 U.S.
17 286, 296-97 (1942) (recognizing “the distinctive obligation of trust incumbent upon the 18 Government in its dealings with these dependent and sometimes exploited people,” and 19 observing that “[p]ayment of funds at the request of a tribal council which . . . was 20 [known to be] composed of representatives faithless to their own people and without 21 integrity would be a clear breach of the Government’s fiduciary obligation”).

1 With respect to the Nooksack Tribe, defendants and their predecessors have 2 attempted to balance the deference due under principles of tribal sovereignty with the 3 scrutiny required to fulfill their fiduciary responsibilities. Indeed, in his letter dated 4 October 17, 2016, former PDAS Roberts wrote:

5 I want to be clear that the Department is not interpreting the Tribe's 6 Constitution or interfering in internal tribal matters. The Department fully 7 respects tribal sovereignty and tribal law. Rather, we are underscoring that 8 pursuant to our government-to-government relationship between the United 9 States and the Nooksack Tribe, we will only recognize action taken in 10 accordance with the Tribe's Constitution and Bylaws.

11 Under Federal law, the United States has a duty to ensure that tribal trust 12 funds, Federal funds for the benefit of the Tribe, and our day-to-day 13 government-to-government relationship is with a full quorum of the 14 Council as plainly stated in the Tribe's Constitution and Bylaws.

15 AR 1-2. In reiterating this position in his letters dated November 14, 2016, and 16 December 23, 2016, PDAS Roberts quoted from the order issued on March 22, 2016, by 17 the Nooksack Court of Appeals, which addressed attempts to preclude certain tribal 18 members from voting before they had been legitimately disenrolled. AR 3-4; AR 5-6.
19 By relying on the decision of the Nooksack Court of Appeals, rather than his own 20 understanding of tribal law, PDAS Roberts exhibited the requisite regard for tribal 21 sovereignty, while making clear that continued efforts to circumvent the tribal courts' 22 rulings and the legal prerequisites to disenrollment proceedings, including a proper 23 quorum of the Nooksack Tribal Council, could result in a loss of federal funding and the BIA's resumption of law enforcement services on the reservation. See AR 5-6.

Similarly, the MOA does not purport to interpret Nooksack law, but rather refers to the decision of the Nooksack Court of Appeals in Belmont v. Kelly. AR 8. In the 1 MOA, Chairman Kelly, on behalf of himself and the Tribe, accepted the binding effect of 2 the order entered by the Nooksack Court of Appeals on March 22, 2016. Id. Chairman 3 Kelly and the Tribe further agreed that all tribal members purportedly disenrolled since 4 March 24, 2016, were still members of the Nooksack Tribe and were entitled to vote in 5 tribal elections, run for tribal office, and receive the benefits of tribal membership unless 6 and until they were disenrolled by a mechanism that accorded due process and was 7 consistent with Nooksack law. AR 8-9.

8 In contrast to PDAS Roberts's correspondence and the MOA, Acting RD Shaw's 9 letter dated September 7, 2017, displayed minimal deference to Chairman Kelly and the 10 Nooksack Tribe, and instead set forth six directives aimed at conducting an election with 11 results that Acting RD Shaw could endorse. Ex. E to Galanda Decl. (docket no. 12-5).
12 None of Acting RD Shaw's directives, however, were derived from tribal law. Rather, 13 they involved (i) issues addressed in the MOA, for example, the purported recall of 14 council member Carmen Tageant, see AR 7, and Acting RD Shaw's directive to reinstate 15 her within seven days, Ex. E to Galanda Decl. (docket no. 12-5 at 2, ¶ 1), and the "actual" 16 provision of tribal benefits to purported disenrollees, see id. at 2, ¶ 4; (ii) logistics, for 17 example, notifying purported disenrollees of their rights and a schedule for announcing 18 the availability of and disbursing candidate packets, see id. at 2-3, ¶¶ 2, 3, & 5; and 19 (iii) the appearance of unfairness associated with the appointment of Katrice Rodriguez 20 as the Election Superintendent, id. at 3, ¶ 6. With regard to the last topic, Acting RD 21 Shaw cited no provision of the Nooksack Constitution, Bylaws, or Tribal Code requiring 22

1 the selection of a different Election Superintendent, and he did not in any way suggest 2 that his directive was premised on an interpretation of tribal law.

3 In sum, none of the materials on which plaintiffs rely, namely the correspondence 4 of former PDAS Roberts, the MOA signed by former Acting Assistant Secretary Black, 5 and the letter sent by former Acting RD Shaw, articulated a policy of “interpreting Tribal 6 constitutional, statutory, and common law to determine whether the Tribal Council was 7 validly seated as the governing body of the Tribe.” To the contrary, PDAS Roberts 8 explicitly disclaimed any attempt to interpret the Tribe’s Constitution or interfere in its 9 internal affairs. See AR 1. Moreover, even if Interior had operated under a policy of 10 interpreting tribal law, any such policy related only to substantive matters, i.e., who may 11 vote, as opposed to how they may vote, and who may take action on behalf of the Tribe.
12 See United States v. One 1985 Mercedes, 917 F.2d 415, 423 (9th Cir. 1990) (holding that, 13 to prevail on a claim that an agency “impermissibly departed from its own policy,” an 14 aggrieved party must show inter alia that the policy at issue prescribed a substantive rule, 15 and not an interpretive, organizational, or procedural rule); see also Seminole Nation, 223 16 F. Supp. 2d at 141 (to constitute “final agency action” for purposes of judicial review 17 under the APA, the action “must be one by which ‘rights or obligations have been 18 determined,’ or from which ‘legal consequences will flow’”). Because Interior did not 19 establish a policy of construing the Nooksack Constitution, Bylaws, and/or Tribal Code 20 with respect to how Nooksack Tribal Council elections should be conducted, Acting 21 RD Stange’s subsequent refusal to “interpret tribal law” with regard to whether ballots 22 could be submitted by hand or had to be postmarked, see AR 89, was not inconsistent 23

1 with Interior's prior policies. Plaintiffs' contention that Acting RD Stange's endorsement 2 of the 2017 election results and PDAS Tahsuda's recognition in March 2018 of the 3 Nooksack Tribal Council flowed from an improper "change in policy" lacks merit.

4 C. Interior's Supervision of the 2017 Elections

5 Contrary to plaintiff's assertions, Interior appears to have "stayed the course" 6 throughout the election process. While showing respect for the Tribe and its election 7 officials, the BIA closely monitored the situation. On three separate occasions, Richard 8 Ferguson, Acting Realty Officer for the BIA Puget Sound Agency, traveled to Deming, 9 Washington to observe activities related to the primary election held on November 4, 10 2017. See AR 647, 649, & 651. On his first visit on October 6, 2017, while working 11 with Katrice Rodriguez, Nooksack's Election Superintendent, Officer Ferguson 12 personally sealed approximately 95% of the outgoing primary ballots, and he witnessed 13 the sealing of the other 5% and the verification of 100% of the ballots. AR 647. He also 14 personally carried all of the ballots to the post office for mailing. Id. On his second and 15 third trips, on October 26 and November 2, 2017, respectively, Officer Ferguson met 16 with Election Superintendent Rodriguez and Nooksack Tribal Police Chief Michael Alby, 17 accompanied them to the post office to collect the ballots received that day, witnessed the 18 recording of such ballots in the election database, and viewed the evidence vault where 19 ballots that had been cast were being secured until the date of the primary election.
20 AR 649 & 651.

21 Officer Ferguson made another journey to Deming on November 28, 2017, during 22 the general election process. AR 656-57. He observed five tribal members receive 23

1 replacement ballots from Election Superintendent Rodriguez. AR 656. Replacement 2 ballots were available to tribal members whose ballots had been lost or otherwise spoiled
3 or had been returned to the Tribe as undeliverable. Id.; see also AR 156 (Nooksack 4 Tribal Code § 62.06.020(B)(4)). With respect to lost or spoiled ballots, the tribal member 5 was given the option of mailing the replacement ballot at his or her own expense or 6 handing it to Police Chief Alby to carry to the evidence vault. AR 656. If the original 7 ballot had been returned as undeliverable, the tribal member was instructed to mail the 8 replacement ballot using the postage paid envelope included in the replacement packet.
9 Id. A total of 56 replacement ballots were issued. Ex. C to Rodriguez Decl., AR 302-11; 10 see also Rodriguez Decl. at ¶ 10, AR 663. Ballots for the general election were 11 sequentially numbered, and a log was kept of which ballot was mailed to each tribal 12 member eligible to vote and of any replacement ballot issued to a tribal member. See 13 Ex. B to Rodriguez Decl., AR 287-300.

14 During his visit on November 28, 2017, Officer Ferguson attended a “ballot party” 15 at the Nooksack community center in Everson, Washington. AR 656-57. A United 16 States Postal Service (“USPS”) staff member was also at the “ballot party,” and Officer 17 Ferguson saw the postal worker collect between 12 and 16 ballots, indicating that they 18 would be processed as though they had been deposited into a USPS mailbox. Id.
19 According to Officer Ferguson, Election Superintendent Rodriguez disavowed any 20 connection between the “ballot party” and the election board. AR 656.

21 On the date of the general election, December 2, 2017, Officer Ferguson and 22 Marcella Teters, Superintendent of the BIA Puget Sound Agency, traveled to Deming to 23

1 monitor the tallying of the ballots. AR 653. Of the 1,536 ballots originally mailed, for 2 which 56 replacements were issued, a total of 812 ballots were cast. See id. & AR 663.
3 According to Superintendent Teters, the ballots were opened in her presence, the 4 identifying numbers were cut off the ballots, and the ballots were stacked. AR 653. Of 5 the ballots received, 17 were deemed spoiled, 15 had not been placed in the provided 6 secrecy envelope, and 2 were found in the same envelope. Id. The envelopes, as well as 7 the numbers cut from the corners of the ballots, were retained. Id. The votes were then 8 counted, and the ballots, along with the tally sheets, were transported to the Nooksack 9 Tribal Police Department for safe keeping. AR 654.

10 After the BIA had reviewed the log of ballots for the 2017 general election, then 11 Acting RD Shaw wrote to Chairman Kelly to inquire about unexplained gaps in the 12 numerical sequence of ballot numbers. AR 659-60. Election Superintendent Rodriguez 13 clarified that two typographical errors had been made on the log (1721 should have been 14 721, and 3196 should have been 316), that 44 ballots with the numbers 1535-1562 and 15 1603-1618 had not been used, that the ballot numbered 1637 was watermarked as a 16 sample, and that no ballots were numbered above 1637. AR 663-64. On January 24, 17 2018, Superintendent Teters and Officer Ferguson went to Deming, retrieved the 18 materials stored in the police vault, and verified (with a few exceptions) the information 19 supplied by Election Superintendent Rodriguez. See AR 666-67, Praeipce (docket 20 no. 27-1). The 44 unused ballots and 56 replacement ballots were confirmed, as well as 21 all but one of the ballots returned as undeliverable, which appears to have been 22 misplaced. AR 666. The numbers cut from the corners of the ballots were analyzed, 23

1 with the following discrepancies identified: (i) two items were numbered 253; (ii) the 2 corner of ballot number 1020 was discovered, but it had not been logged, and was likely 3 mistakenly inputted as 120, which appeared twice on the list; and (iii) nine numbers were 4 missing, which was consistent with receiving ballots from which the voters had already 5 cut off the numbers. AR 667.

6       Given the amount of scrutiny and involvement the BIA had in the election process, 7 the Court is persuaded that Interior more than satisfactorily discharged its duty to ensure 8 that the Nooksack Tribal Council recognized by PDAS Tahsuda, in his role as Acting 9 Assistant Secretary, was “duly constituted” and represented the Tribe “as a whole.” See 10 Miwok, 5 F. Supp. 3d at 97. Plaintiffs have speculated that, by accepting ballots in 11 person rather than strictly by mail, Election Superintendent Rodriguez either enabled or 12 engaged in ballot box “stuffing,” and they accuse defendants of being dilatory for not 13 insisting on ballots being returned via post and for not having a representative physically 14 present when ballots were removed from their exterior envelopes. Plaintiffs, however, 15 have had unfettered access to the logs of ballots for both the primary and general 16 elections, which list, by tribal member and ballot number, the ballots that were mailed, 17 the ballots that were returned as undeliverable, the ballots that were issued as 18 replacements, and the ballots that were cast, but they have offered no evidence that any 19 person assigned to a ballot that was counted did not in fact vote. Plaintiffs have not made 20 any showing that defendants’ actions were “arbitrary, capricious, an abuse of discretion, 21 or otherwise not in accordance with law,” and defendants are entitled to judgment in their 22 favor as a matter of law.
23

1 Conclusion
