

¶¶ 109–119.) Defendants move to dismiss Plaintiff’s claims for lack of subject matter jurisdiction<sup>1</sup> and failure to state a claim. (ECF No. 18, Defs. Mot. to Dismiss.) In the alternative, Defendants move to transfer all claims that are not dismissed to the United States District Court for the Southern District of Indiana. (Id., at 33–39.) For the reasons set forth below, the court will DENY Defendants’ Motion to Dismiss, GRANT Plaintiff’s motion for a preliminary injunction, and ORDER Plaintiff to show cause why this case should not be transferred.

Should the timing of this ruling be raised in subsequent litigation, the court notes that though Defendants have accused the court of “abusive delay,” Barr v. Lee, No. 20A8 (July 14, 2020), App. for a Stay or Vacatur at 6–7, the court’s sole responsibility is to endeavor to address, thoroughly and promptly, the claims of the four individuals whose execution dates were announced by the Government only one month before they were to occur. The speed with which the government seeks to carry out these executions, and the Supreme Court’s prioritization of that pace over additional legal process, makes it considerably more likely that injunctions may issue at the last minute, despite the efforts of Plaintiffs’ counsel to raise, and the court to adjudicate, the claims in a timely fashion.

I. BACKGROUND

After a hiatus in federal executions of over fifteen years, on July 25, 2019, the U.S. Department of Justice (DOJ) announced plans to execute five inmates who had been sentenced to death under the federal death penalty statute. See Press Release, Dep’t of Justice, Federal <sup>1</sup> At the time Defendants moved to dismiss, Plaintiff’s execution date had passed, and a new date had not been scheduled. (Defs. Mot. to Dismiss, at 12.) Because an execution date has since been scheduled, the court need not address Defendants’ claim that because there was no pending execution, the court lacked subject matter jurisdiction.

Government to Resume Capital Punishment After Nearly Two Decade Lapse (July 25, 2019), <https://www.justice.gov/opa/pr/federal-government-resume-capital-punishment-after-nearly-two-decade-lapse>. To implement these executions, the Federal Bureau of Prisons (BOP) adopted a new execution protocol: the 2019 Protocol. See In re Fed. Bureau of Prisons' Execution Protocol Cases, No. 19-mc-145 (D.D.C. November 13, 2019), ECF No. 39-1, at 1021–75.

On November 20, 2019, the court preliminarily enjoined the executions of four inmates: Alfred Bourgeois, Daniel Lewis Lee, Dustin Lee Honken, and Wesley Ira Purkey. See id., ECF No. 50, at 15. The court found that these Plaintiffs had demonstrated a likelihood of success on the merits of their claims that the 2019 Protocol violates the Federal Death Penalty Act (FDPA), but the court did not rule on their other statutory and constitutional claims. Id., at 13–14. In April of this year, a divided D.C. Circuit panel vacated the preliminary injunction. In re Fed. Bureau of Prisons' Execution Protocol Cases, 955 F.3d 106, 113 (D.C. Cir. 2020), cert. denied sub nom. Bourgeois v. Barr, No. 19-1348, 2020 WL 3492763 (June 29, 2020). The Court based its ruling solely on Plaintiffs' FDPA and APA claims, and noted that “regardless of our disposition, several claims would remain open on remand.” Execution Protocol Cases, 955 F.3d at 113 (per curiam).

On June 15, 2020, the DOJ and BOP scheduled a new execution date for Purkey—July 15, 2020. On July 2, 2020, the Seventh Circuit stayed Purkey's execution, and at the time of this filing, that stay remains in place. Purkey v. United States, No. 19-3318, 2020 WL 3603779 (7th Cir. July 2, 2020). This court also preliminarily enjoined Purkey's execution, among others, on the grounds that the manner of execution violates the Eighth Amendment. See In re Fed. Bureau of Prisons' Execution Protocol Cases, No. 19-mc-145 (D.D.C. July 13, 2020), ECF No. 136. The government sought a stay of the injunction at the D.C. Circuit, which was denied. See In re

Fed. Bureau of Prisons' Execution Protocol Cases, No. 20-5199 (D.C. Cir. July 13, 2020).

Defendants simultaneously sought a stay of the injunction at the United States Supreme Court, which the Court granted, allowing Mr. Lee to be executed on July 14, 2020. See Barr v. Lee, No. 20A8, 2020 WL 3964985 (July 14, 2020) (per curiam). The Supreme Court held that Plaintiffs had “not established that they are likely to succeed on the merits of their Eighth Amendment claim.” Id. at *1–2. Four Justices dissented. Id. at *2–3.

II. LEGAL STANDARDS

A. Motion to Dismiss

A motion to dismiss under Rule 12(b)(6) for failure to state a claim tests the legal sufficiency of a complaint. Browning v. Clinton, 292 F.3d 235, 242 (D.C. Cir. 2002). The court does not assess the truth of what is asserted nor “whether a plaintiff has any evidence to back up what is in the complaint.” Id. (citation omitted). “To survive a motion to dismiss, a complaint must contain sufficient factual matter, accepted as true, to state a claim to relief that is plausible on its face.” Ashcroft v. Iqbal, 556 U.S. 662, 678 (2009) (internal quotation marks and citation omitted). “The plausibility standard is not akin to a ‘probability requirement,’ but it asks for more than a sheer possibility that a defendant has acted unlawfully.” Id. (citation omitted). “Factual allegations must be enough to raise a right to relief above the speculative level” and move plaintiff’s claims “across the line from conceivable to plausible.” Bell Atl. Corp. v. Twombly, 550 U.S. 554, 555, 570 (2007). Facts that are “merely consistent” with a defendant’s liability do not meet the plausibility standard. Iqbal, 556 U.S. at 678 (citation omitted).

The court presumes the truth of a plaintiff’s factual allegations, see Iqbal, 556 U.S. at 679, and construes the complaint “in favor of the plaintiff, who must be granted the benefit of all inferences that can be derived from the facts alleged.” Hettinga v. United States, 677 F.3d 471, 476 (D.C. Cir. 2012) (citing Schuler v. United States, 617 F.2d 605, 608 (D.C. Cir. 1979)). This presumption does not apply, however, to a “legal conclusion couched as a factual allegation.” Iqbal, 556 U.S. at 678; see Ralls Corp. v. Comm. on Foreign Inv. in U.S., 758 F.3d 296, 315 (D.C. Cir. 2014) (the court “do[es] not accept as true . . . the plaintiff’s legal conclusions or inferences that are unsupported by the facts alleged.”).

B. Preliminary Injunction

A preliminary injunction is an “extraordinary remedy” that is “never awarded as of right.” Winter v. Nat. Res. Def. Council, Inc., 555 U.S. 7, 24 (2008) (citing Munaf v. Geren, 553 U.S. 674, 689–90 (2008)). Courts consider four factors on a motion for a preliminary injunction: (1) the likelihood of plaintiff’s success on the merits, (2) the threat of irreparable harm to the plaintiff absent an injunction, (3) the balance of equities, and (4) the public interest. Id. at 20 (citations omitted); John Doe Co. v. Consumer Fin. Prot. Bureau, 849 F.3d 1129, 1131 (D.C. Cir. 2017). When the government is the opposing party, as is the case here, the third and fourth factors merge. See Nken v. Holder, 556 U.S. 418 (2009).

The D.C. Circuit has traditionally evaluated claims for injunctive relief on a sliding scale, such that “a strong showing on one factor could make up for a weaker showing on another.” Sherley v. Sebelius, 644 F.3d 388, 392 (D.C. Cir. 2011). It has been suggested, however, that a movant’s showing regarding success on the merits “is an independent, free-standing requirement for a preliminary injunction.” Id. at 393 (quoting Davis v. Pension Ben. Guar. Corp., 571 F.3d 1288, 1296 (D.C. Cir. 2009) (Kavanaugh, J., concurring)).

III. ANALYSIS

A. Motion to Dismiss

1. 28 U.S.C. § 2241

Defendant contends that Plaintiff raises “core habeas” claims that “must be brought by an action for a writ of habeas corpus under the statute authorizing that writ.” Hill v. McDonough, 547 U.S. 573, 576 (2006).

i. Preemption

“Federal law opens two main avenues to relief on complaints related to imprisonment,” a petition for habeas corpus or a claim under 42 U.S.C. § 1983. Muhammad v. Close, 540 U.S. 749, 750 (2004). However, when a claim falls within the “core” of habeas, that claim cannot be brought under section 1983, but must instead “yield to the more specific federal habeas statute.” Nelson v. Campbell, 541 U.S. 637, 643 (2004). Here, Plaintiff opens a third avenue by seeking equitable relief directly under the Constitution, (Compl., ¶ 11), but if that claim is within the “core” of habeas it must also “yield to the more specific federal habeas statute.” See Nelson, 541 U.S. at 643.

In Seminole Tribe of Fla. v. Florida, the Court held: “Where Congress has created a remedial scheme for the enforcement of a particular federal right, we have, in suits against federal officers, refused to supplement that scheme with one created by the judiciary.” 517 U.S. 44, 74 (1996) (citing Schweiker v. Chilicky, 487 U.S. 412, 423 (1988)). In the habeas corpus context, Congress has provided a remedial scheme under section 2241. Accordingly, the Court in Preiser v. Rodriguez found that it would “wholly frustrate explicit congressional intent” if a plaintiff could avoid federal habeas corpus laws “by the simple expedient of putting a different label on their pleadings.” 411 U.S. 475, 489–490 (1973). Consistent with Supreme Court precedent and congressional intent, this court finds that to the extent Plaintiff's claims are within the "core" of habeas, they must be brought under 28 U.S.C. § 2241.

ii. Core Habeas

A plaintiff's claims "challenging the fact of his conviction or the duration of his sentence" fall within the "core" of habeas corpus. Nelson, 541 U.S. at 643 (citing Preiser, 411 U.S. at 489). In the death penalty context, the criterion for a core habeas claim is whether "a grant of relief to the inmate would necessarily bar the execution." Hill, 547 U.S. at 583 (2006). A claim is not core habeas when injunctive relief would not challenge the sentence itself and "the inmate appear[s] willing to concede the existence of an acceptable alternative." See id. at 579 (citing Nelson, 541 U.S. at 645–646).

Plaintiff makes two claims for relief under Ford: that his execution would violate the Eighth Amendment because he is currently incompetent, and that executing him without providing a hearing to determine his competency would violate the Eighth Amendment and the Due Process Clause of the Fifth Amendment. (Compl., ¶¶ 108–115.)

Under Ford, when a plaintiff claims incompetence, "the only question raised is not whether, but when, his execution may take place." Ford, 477 U.S. at 425 (emphasis in original) (Powell, J., concurring); see also Panetti v. Quarterman, 551 U.S. 930, 949 (2007) (finding that Justice Powell's concurring opinion controls procedure for Ford claims). This temporal question is distinct from "the antecedent question whether petitioner should be executed at all." Ford, 477 U.S. at 425 (Powell, J., concurring). In fact, Justice Powell noted that incompetence may be temporary, and that a person may be returned to competency in order to carry out his sentence. See id. at n.5.

Under this analysis, neither of Plaintiff's Ford claims is a core habeas claim. The first claim is not core habeas because success will not necessarily bar his execution. As Ford makes clear, a claim of incompetence does not affect whether a plaintiff should be executed, but rather when execution would be appropriate. See 477 U.S. at 425 (Powell, J., concurring). Plaintiff argues that he should be executed when he is competent, not that his execution should be permanently enjoined. (ECF No. 20, Pl. Opp., at 15.) Therefore, his claim falls outside the core of habeas because it does not seek to bar his execution or challenge his sentence. Instead, success on this claim would result in a temporary injunction lasting until Plaintiff's competency is restored. (See id., at 16.) In acknowledging that he may be rendered competent, Plaintiff appears to concede that an acceptable alternative exists, namely that his sentence can be carried out when he is competent. (See id.)

The second claim is not a core habeas claim because, as the Supreme Court stated in Hill, a claim is not core habeas when it seeks only to enjoin the intended manner of execution and “does not challenge the [execution] sentence as a general matter.” 547 U.S. at 580. Plaintiff's second claim challenges the manner of his execution by arguing that due process entitles him to a competency hearing before he can be executed. (Compl., ¶ 119.) Success on this claim would not challenge his death sentence but would only provide him a competency hearing. Again, Plaintiff appears to concede that there is an acceptable alternative—his execution can occur after he is found competent. (Pl. Opp., at 16.)

2. Jurisdiction

Because neither of Plaintiff's claims are core habeas claims, this court has jurisdiction to hear them. A claim that falls outside of the core of habeas corpus does not need to be brought pursuant to section 2241. Nelson, 541 U.S. at 643 (“[C]onstitutional claims that merely challenge the conditions of a prisoner's confinement, whether the inmate seeks monetary or injunctive relief, fall outside of that core and may be brought pursuant to § 1983 in the first instance.") Plaintiff alleges that if he were to be executed as the government plans, his rights to Due Process under the Eighth and Fifth Amendments would be violated. (Compl., ¶ 119.) Because this claim is of constitutional dimension and falls outside of the core of habeas, this court is satisfied that subject matter jurisdiction is appropriate under 28 U.S.C. § 1331. See Bell v. Hood, 327 U.S. 678, 681–83 (1946) (holding that federal question jurisdiction is appropriate where a plaintiff brings claims directly under the Constitution and those claims are neither made solely for the purpose of obtaining jurisdiction nor insubstantial and frivolous).

Even if Plaintiff's claims were core habeas, this court would still have jurisdiction. This is because the jurisdictional requirement that habeas petitioners file in the district of confinement, see Rumsfeld v. Padilla, 542 U.S. 426, 447, (2004), "is best understood as a question of personal jurisdiction or venue" not a question of subject matter jurisdiction. Id. at 451 (Kennedy, J., concurring). Therefore, the requirement "can be waived by the Government," id. at 452; and in this case, it was waived. Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(h)(1)(A) provides that a defense listed in Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(b)(2)–(5) is waived when, as here, it is not raised in a motion to dismiss. (See, e.g., Defs. Mot. to Dismiss, at 12–21, 33; ECF No. 21, Defs. Reply, at 20 ("venue is proper here").) In other words, Padilla, along with the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure, require that Defendants challenge Plaintiff's claims on jurisdictional grounds, not on Plaintiff's ability to state a claim, yet Defendants only move to dismiss for failure to state a claim under Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(b)(6), and in fact concede the jurisdictional grounds—e.g. that personal jurisdiction and venue are appropriate in this district.

3. Substantial Threshold Showing of Incompetence

Separately, Defendants argue that Plaintiff has failed to state a claim because he has not plausibly alleged that he is incompetent. (Defs. Mot. to Dismiss, at 21–28.) Under Ford, a Plaintiff must make “a substantial threshold showing of insanity” in order to overcome the presumption of sanity and be afforded a competency hearing. See Panetti, 551 U.S. at 949. Specifically, a Plaintiff must make a substantial showing that his “mental illness prevents him from ‘rational[ly] understanding’ why the State seeks to [execute him].” Madison v. Alabama, 586 U.S. __ (2019) (quoting Panetti, 551 U.S. at 959). “[T]he issue is whether a ‘prisoner’s concept of reality’ is ‘so impair[ed]’ that he cannot grasp the execution’s ‘meaning and purpose’ or the ‘link between [his] crime and its punishment.’” Id. (quoting Panetti, 551 U.S. at 960).

Counsel for Plaintiff makes four arguments to show he is incompetent. First, he does not understand that his execution is punishment for his capital crime. (Compl., ¶¶ 21–37.) Second, he has a documented history of mental illness, including delusional and paranoid thinking, starting in childhood and continuing to the present. (Compl., ¶¶ 38–85.) Third, his dementia has caused a decline in his mental health. (Compl., ¶¶ 86–102.) Fourth, his long-term inability to effectively communicate with counsel evinces his incompetence. (Compl., ¶¶ 103–108.) To support each of these arguments, Plaintiff’s counsel submitted a series of reports and declarations regarding Plaintiff’s conditions, which the court credits. Most notably, Plaintiff provides a report by Dr. Bhushan Agharkar, stating that Plaintiff lacks a rational understanding of the basis for his execution. (Agharkar Report, at 11–12.)

Although Defendants dispute Plaintiff’s claim of incompetence, they provided no independent evidence of competence. (Defs. Mot. to Dismiss, at 21–31.) Based on the record before it, the court finds that Plaintiff has made a sufficient showing to survive Defendants’ motion to dismiss. Having made a substantial showing of incompetence, Plaintiff is therefore entitled to an opportunity to be heard, including a fair hearing. See Ford, 477 U.S. at 425–26 (Powell, J., concurring).

B. Preliminary Injunction

1. Likelihood of Success on the Merits

Defendants’ opposition to Plaintiff’s renewed motion for a preliminary injunction restates the arguments made in their motion to dismiss: (1) that Plaintiff’s core habeas claims were not properly brought under 28 U.S.C. § 2241 (ECF No. 26, Def. Opp. to Prelim. Inj. at 7–18) and (2) that Plaintiff has not plausibly alleged that he is incompetent. (Id., at 18–24.) However, for the reasons explained above, the court has jurisdiction over Plaintiff’s claims and Plaintiff has made the substantial threshold showing required by Ford, and in doing so, has demonstrated a likelihood of success on his claim for a competency hearing. Accordingly, the court finds that Plaintiff has satisfied the likelihood of success requirement for a preliminary injunction.

2. Irreparable Harm

In order to prevail on a request for preliminary injunction, irreparable harm “must be certain and great, actual and not theoretical, and so imminent that there is a clear and present need for equitable relief to prevent irreparable harm,” and it “must be beyond remediation.” League of Women Voters of U.S. v. Newby, 838 F.3d 1, 7–8 (D.C. Cir. 2016) (citing Chaplaincy of Full Gospel Churches v. England, 454 F.3d 290, 297 (D.C. Cir. 2006)) (internal quotation marks and brackets omitted). In Ford, Justice Marshall acknowledged that “execution is the most irremediable and unfathomable of penalties.” 477 U.S. at 411 (citing Woodson v. North Carolina, 428 U.S. 280, 305 (1976) (plurality opinion)). Here, absent a preliminary injunction, Plaintiff would be executed without being given the opportunity to be heard regarding his competence to suffer such a sentence. As this court has already found, Plaintiff has made a substantial threshold showing of incompetence. While Defendants may disagree with the Plaintiff's experts regarding his competence, they do not dispute that irreparable harm is likely. (Def. Opp. to Prelim. Inj., at 18–23, 27–29.) Based on this record, the court finds that Plaintiff has shown that absent injunctive relief, he will suffer irreparable harm.

3. Balance of Equities and Public Interest

Defendants devote one paragraph of their opposition to their argument that the government has an interest in enforcing Plaintiff's sentence. (Def. Opp. to Prelim. Inj. at 28–29.) It is true that “[b]oth the [government] and the victims of crime have an important interest in the timely enforcement of a [death] sentence.” Bucklew v. Precythe, 139 S. Ct. 1112, 1133 (2019) (quoting Hill, 547 U.S. at 584). The Supreme Court has made clear, however, that executing someone “whose mental illness prevents him from comprehending the reasons for the penalty or its implications” has been considered “abhorrent” for centuries. Ford, 477 U.S. at 417. “Just because the death penalty is involved is no reason to take shortcuts—indeed, it is a reason not to do so.” Purkey v. United States, 2020 WL 3603779, at *11; see also Cooley v. Taft, 430 F. Supp. 2d 702, 708 (S.D. Ohio 2006) (“The public interest has never been and could never be served by rushing to judgment at the expense of a condemned inmate’s constitutional rights.”); Harris v. Johnson, 323 F. Supp. 2d 797, 810 (S.D. Tex. 2004) (“Confidence in the humane application of the governing laws . . . must be in the public’s interest.”). Here, this court seeks to avoid the abhorrent act that the Supreme Court warns against by finding that the equities and the public interest favor Plaintiff.

Considering all these factors, the court finds that a preliminary injunction is warranted.

C. Transfer

Finally, Defendants request that this court transfer all Plaintiff's claims that are not dismissed to the United States District Court for the Southern District of Indiana. (Defs. Mot. To Dismiss at 3; Defs. Reply at 20 (arguing for transfer even though "venue is proper").) Transfer is "intended to place discretion in the district court to adjudicate motions for transfer according to an 'individualized, case-by-case consideration of convenience and fairness.'" Stewart Org., Inc. v. Ricoh Corp., 487 U.S. 22, 29 (1988) (quoting Van Dusen v. Barrack, 376 U.S. 612 (1964)). A district court considering transfer "must evaluate both the convenience of the parties and various public-interest considerations." Atl. Marine Const. Co. v. U.S. Dist. Court for W. Dist. of Tex., 571 U.S. 49, 62 (2013). In Piper Aircraft Co. v. Reyno, 454 U.S. 235, 241, n. 6 (1981), the Supreme Court detailed public and private interest factors a district court must consider. Private-interest factors include the "relative ease of access to sources of proof; availability of compulsory process for attendance of unwilling, and the cost of obtaining attendance of willing, witnesses; possibility of view of premises, if view would be appropriate to the action; and all other practical problems that make trial of a case easy, expeditious and inexpensive." Id. (internal quotation marks omitted). Public-interest factors include "the administrative difficulties flowing from court congestion; the local interest in having localized controversies decided at home; [and] the interest in having the trial of a diversity case in a forum that is at home with the law." Id. (internal quotation marks omitted). However, "a plaintiff's choice [of forum] ordinarily deserves substantial deference." Id. at 242.

In Starnes v. McGuire, 512 F.2d 918, 929–933 (D.C. Cir. 1974), the D.C. Circuit articulated five factors affecting transfer in prisoner petitions: (1) difficulty of communication with counsel, (2) difficulty of transferring the prisoner (3) availability of witnesses and files (4) whether the petition sounds in habeas corpus, and (5) speed of resolution. Where a case involves factors weighing both for and against transfer, “the District Court must determine the correct action in light of all the factors.” Id. at 933.

Defendants contend that each of the five Starnes factors weigh in favor of transfer. (Defs. Mot. to Dismiss at 35–38.) Plaintiff does not directly address the Starnes factors but does suggest that several important witnesses reside in close proximity to this district. (Pl. Opp. at 34–35.) The court is mindful of Defendants’ concerns regarding convenience. However, because transfer is discretionary and Plaintiff’s choice of forum is entitled to substantial deference, the court will order Plaintiff to show cause why this case should not be transferred to the United States District Court for the Southern District of Indiana.

IV. CONCLUSION

For the foregoing reasons, Defendants’ motion to dismiss is hereby DENIED and Plaintiff’s motion for a preliminary injunction is hereby GRANTED. It is further ORDERED that Defendants (along with their respective successors in office, officers, agents, servants, employees, attorneys, and anyone acting in concert with them) are enjoined from executing Plaintiff Wesley Ira Purkey until further order of this court.

It is further ordered that Plaintiff must SHOW CAUSE, no later than July 31, 2020, why this case should not be transferred to the United States District Court for the Southern District of Indiana.
